

G 5.3 FISHING AND AQUACULTURE

G5.3.1

Notes explaining how fishing for Dorado ('lampuki') is done.

Research by Etienne Vella - Ġhajnsielem

Fishing for Dorado

Dorado is not caught during the whole year, and it is caught with the net or feather but not with the fishing rod.

Fishermen have a 'skuna' with which they go far at sea in order to catch the Dorado.

Sometimes they remain for 3-4 days between only sky and water.

The season starts in September but the fishermen usually start placing their 'kannizzati' from August.

'Kannizzata' is like a big raft made up of corks, sacks, palm leaves, cane stems and other things that float over water.

These are tied together to form a kind of roof over the surface of the sea. The Dorado fish then goes under it to shelter from the sun.

To prevent them being dragged by the sea current, they tie the 'kannizzata' with ropes to bricks/rocks thrown to the bottom of the sea. On the top of the 'kannizzata' they put a buoy or a cork so each fisherman can recognise which one is their 'kannizzata'. This is called peak ('cima).

The fishermen go out to sea with their boats and when they arrive near their 'kannizati' they use the feather to bring the Dorado closer to them. Then they turn over the 'kannizzata' with the net and the Dorado or pilot-fish are caught in the net.

Fishing Creels

Boxes where to store fish to be taken to the fish market.

On the 'skuna' there are, the patron, who is the owner, and he usually has about four other fishermen helping him.

It is worth mentioning that Dorado is also caught using the feather. The feather is a very long rope with a lot of hooks. These hooks are hidden with the feather or other items.

The types of fish caught in the Dorado season are Pilot-fish, Lesser Amberjack and Tuna.

